
PAREXEL®

Right where you need us™

Senior Medical Writer

Do you want more from your medical writing career?

At PAREXEL, you will have the opportunity to use your medical writing skills for more than writing clinical study reports. We are currently looking for a Senior Medical Writer to work on varied document types including protocols, regulatory submission documents such as clinical overviews, and pharmacovigilance documents such as PSURs and ASRs. You will work with medical, regulatory and statistical staff as part of the clinical team, as well as providing medical writing expertise directly to our clients.

You will join a small friendly group of writers, with all the opportunities and benefits offered by a large company such as PAREXEL.

Within the group, there are excellent opportunities for career development. Our well developed training programme allows you to capitalise on the teaching provided by senior managers; several of whom are well known trainers within the medical writing industry. In addition, we will use your skills to the full to provide technical mentoring and training to our junior writers.

The Senior Medical Writer role will also lead to opportunities to become involved in process improvement, business development and resource management.

Candidates should have experience in regulatory writing, and knowledge of preparing documents to ICH standards as well as proven organisational abilities, and excellent written and oral communication skills. All candidates must be fluent in written and spoken English.

PAREXEL offers a competitive salary, including pension scheme, and a flexible working environment. The positions are based in Uxbridge, Sheffield, Paris or Berlin. Home based working and/or flexible working hours may be available to the right candidate.

To apply please send your CV with a covering e-mail to HR-Europe@parexel.com.

For further details on PAREXEL, and a detailed job description, please visit our web site at www.parexelcareers.com.